About

Henrik Norman is a Swedish actor, known for a commanding on-screen presence and a versatile career that spans feature films, television dramas, and theatre. Fluent in British English and working conversationally in French and German, he moves with ease between Nordic and international productions, frequently portraying complex professionals and authority figures.

On screen he has appeared in films such as The Art of Telling Lies, The Sugar Experiment (Sockerexperimentet) and Borg vs. McEnroe, and in series Farang, Top Dog, Beck, Gåsmamman and Max Anger. On stage he has taken leading and pivotal roles from Strindberg to contemporary drama, including The God of Carnage and Dödsdansen. He is also an experienced narrator and voice-over artist, and has written and produced award-winning shorts and documentaries.
